Bibury

Firstly, we visit Bibury. This village is the home of "Arlington Row": A small street of weaver's cottages originally built in the 14th Century. Running through the village is the River Coln and if you take a moment to look beyond the river into the meadow beyond you may spot water voles, moorhens and native plants like marsh orchids.

Look out for:

- Wildlife on the meadow
- A short visit to the trout farm
- The walk behind the meadow
- St Mary's church – believed to date back to 721AD

Burford

Just a short ride from Bibury is the picturesque Burford. Originally a prosperous market town that dates back almost 1000 years, Burford is today attracting visitors to its classic Cotswold buildings and array of local shops. You can stroll through the ages in Burford and admire classic Cotswold architecture at its best.

Look out for:

- Tudor and Georgian houses
- Medieval bridge
- Great tea houses
- The Tolsey Museum
- Burford church

Bourton on The Water

The river Windrush meanders through the village and with bridges over the river and fine architecture surrounding its borders it's not hard to see why Bourton is known as "Venice of the Cotswolds". Simply stroll around and admire the setting and if you want a birds eye view of Bourton, then the Model Village is a great place to go.

Look out for:

- The motor museum
- The model village
- The dragonfly maze

Broadway

Finally, we travel to Broadway. So called because of its broad main street, lined with chestnut trees and honey coloured buildings. Known for its art and crafts there are renowned artists like Jeremy Houghton in residence in the village. The historic Lygon Arms hotel is notable for its fine interior of oak panelling and sculptured ceilings.

Look out for:

- Broadway Tower
- Lygon Arms
- Gordon Russell Museum
